That Harvard should such practise. boys by a score of 20 to 6, shows better than anything else can what wonderful progress has been made by Coach Haughton and his assistants during the past week. The Crimson team that faced Brown was an entirely different looking eleven from the one that faced Holy Cross the previous week.

That Penn. State should be able to defeat Pennsylvania by a score of 22 to 6 was the big upset of years in Pennsylvania football circles. Without detracting in the slightest from the fine showing made by the State team, it must be admitted that Pennsylvania has not the team she used to develop a few years

Yale had an easy time winning from Colgate, as did Princeton from Holy Cross, neither team getting a chance to show anything remarkable on account of their opponents' lack of strength. West Point added to its brilliant record by defeating Lehigh 20 to 0, while Annapo lis was forced to take its second tie in two weeks by being held to a no-score by Western Reserve. Trinity added to its record by defeating Wesleyan in a hard-fought match 14 to 13.

Springfield Training School continue to make a fine showing and its victory over Syracuse stamps it as fully up to the standard set this year by the smaller college elevens. This team has already defeated Williams 6 to 3, and held Amherst to a 3 to 0 score.

The Maine state championship series made little progress toward a final solution, as Colby, which is the only team in the league that has won a victory this year, was held to a 0 to 0 score by Bowdoin, while Bates defeated Maine 5 to 0.

The battle royal of the West was the Michigan-Vanderbilt game which finally resulted in a victory for the Ann Arbor boys by a score of 9 to 8. It was one of the hardest matches that Michigan has had in some time and shows that the champions of the South are about as strong as any team in the West today.

The Wisconsin-Northwestern game proved to be a comparitively easy victory for the Badgers. That the score should have been so one-sided was rather unexpected, although it was generally felt that Northwestern was hardly a match for Coach Richards' heavy eleven. It was Northwestern's first conference defeat of

NEW HAVEN, Conn.-Edward Thompson, head of the Yale ticket department, Ready for the Harvard said yesterday that interest in the coming Yale-Princeton game was greater

The applications closed here Saturday LINE IS STILL WEAK night and it is estimated that Yale grad rates and undergraduates have applied for every one of the 21,000 tickets J-

Princeton has asked for 12,000 seats for the game, the largest in the history of Yale-Princeton football contests. According to Mr. Thompson it will be some time before it will be definitely known how many applications have been made, notwithstanding that a large force of clerks has been put at work to count the cash which has been pouring in to the ticket department the past week

There will be no public sale of tickets Many telegrams have been received here from Yale men in all parts of the country asking for extra tickets for the game. Manager Thompson said it would be impossible to fill all the Yale applications for tickets for the Harvard-Yale game Applications will close for that game next Saturday, and there is more interest being taken in that contest, he says, than in any game ever played on the Cambridge stadium.

RATIONAL GOLF By JASON ROGERS

Most people are agreed that the rules of golf are far too long and compli-cated, making provision for far too many contingencies, which should be dealt with by a broad, simple rule and uniform penalty, yet it cannot be denied that cases occasionally occur which are not only unprovided for in all the manifold provisions of the code, but which almost demand a special rule for themselves, says the London Globe, There is, for instance, the case lately submitted to us of a player in foursome who almost missed his ball, so that it merely feil off and lay close in front tion arose as to whether he was entitled a tendency to overrun their man. Coach Kanaly of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology track team intends to feature the hare and hounds runs for the rest of this season, even though the cross-country team has

In the past men have generally ceased hare and hound running as soon as the team was picked as they have felt that, there was no more use in running. This year Coach Kanaly decided that the training would be valuable to both indoor and outdoor men, as well as beneficial to students in general, who take but little exercise.

With this object in view the runs are to be very short, probably not more than three miles, and besides, the pace will be very easy. Furthermore, the racing at the finish that has been the custom will be discontinued unless the men so wish. Since the cross-country team must work harder than will be required of the hare and hounds runners, they will probably be run in a separate detachment so the inexperienced men need not fear too fast a pace.

The first of these runs will occur Saturday. There will be two or three runs will be held late this afternoon over the besides this one and on Dec. 2 the eight-

Where Only Two Share a Line

"Yes, I thought it over pretty carefully and finally decided I'd have a two-party telephone.

"With only one other subscriber on the line, it is less apt to be 'busy' when I want to use it or when some one wants to talk to me. As I figure it out, my chances of being able to use the telephone, or to be called without a 'line busy' report, are just about eight times as good as when I had a four-party line.

"'Divided ringing' will be a great comfort, too-no bell to sound except my own. I won't have to wonder whether it was 'ring four' or 'ring five,' and be either breaking into other people's talk or missing calls.

"Between you and me, it will also disappoint the curious, should you happen to have a listener on the line, because she won't hear your bell and so know when you are being called. Better look into this."

EASY, GRACEFUL HOME GOWN

Placing of shirrings makes the size adjustable

PRETTY and attractive home gown A is certain to appeal to every woman. Here is a model that is exceptionally attractive and that can be varied in so many ways that it really means several. With the big collar and without the chemisette it is both smart and attractive and so dressy that it practically becomes a tea gown. Without the collar and without the chemisette it is much

Both gowns are closed at the left of the front and lapped in the surplice style that is so much liked this season.

A very practical feature is found in the arrangement of the shirrings. Those in the back are stationary, but those in the front are regulated by means of casings and ribbons.

In the illustration cashmere is trimmed with dotted silk and with lace frills. Gowns of this kind are made from almost every material that is thin, soft and pretty, albatross and challis and the like for the simple ones, foulard, messaline, crepe de chine for those that are more dressy. MISS SCUDDER TELLS BAHAMA GOVERNOR SETTLEMENT WOMEN SOCIOLOGICAL NEEDS

Miss Vida D. Scudder, professor of English literature at Wellesley College, in an address before the College Settletration and argument that its day of usefulness is by no means over. Miss Scudder's remarks were in part as fol-

"Social service is no longer the volunteer work of people longing ardently to help the needy classes but with no definite idea of how best to put this longing into practise. Instead, it is the expert service of persons who are for the most part paid for their work and who know how to proceed along the most effective and practical lines. Chapters in our girls' colleges and preparatory schools, special schools of social technique, fellowships established for women who wish to pursue sociological studies, show the fundamental change in the attitude toward the college settlement. The movement has been professionalized, has to some extent made its escape from philanthropy.

"Today there are eminent persons who are saying that the days of the college settlement are over, that it has fulfiled its purpose and must now retire in favor of the schools, which are to be used henceforth as social centers. Still others maintain that something more radical than the social settlement is needed and that socialism is to achieve the reform. Despite these views which would do away with the college settlement and substithe settlements still have an important part to play and that the world cannot yet get along without the simple. compassionate, human service which they render. While we are waiting for the schools to become social centers we might as well retain the settlements. We cannot take away from the growing boys training and recreation; we cannot take lands. away from mothers opportunities for country and seaside trips; we cannot take away from the babies opportunities for proper care and feeding. In the great social movement of the next ten years we settlement workers must continue to play an active part even if it s only a modest part.

"During the past decade the college settlement movement has made encouraging headway in the colleges as shown by the constant increase in the number of chapters, but today there is danger of the that the island would have nothing to the college settlement gets very little of arrangment might have its drawbacks her thought. TREMONT TEMPLE CORONATION

URGES A POLITICAL

TORONTO, Ont .- Speaking before the Empire Club here, Sir William Grey-Wilson, Governor General of the Bahamds, a cousin of Earl Grev, former Govments Association at Denison House ernor General of Canada, made a strong Saturday afternoon brought out clearly appeal for political union between the the need of the continued existence of Bahamas and the Dominion. Such a the social settlement, showing by illus- union, he considered, would vastly benethe other needed. Just at present what men into the probable effect of such a union upon the trade of both countries. As a matter of fact, he said, both houses of the Bahamas-the Legislative Assembly nominated by the King, and the House of Representatives elected by the people-had passed resolutions asking or the appointment of a commission by both countries to consider if such a union was desirable, and if so, how best to bring it about.

One of the matters which would have to be considered by such a commission, he continued, was the question of the suffrage as at present extended to the blacks in the Bahamas. One solution Christ Episcopal, First Universalist, First which had been proposed was to raise Baptist and First Methodist churches on the qualification of the electors, which the evening of Nov. 4. would have the effect of automatically shutting out the ignorant blacks from the polls. Some of the whites might also be shut out, but he did not think that this would be a grievance of any moment.

In some quarters the argument had been used that the whole of the West Indies should be included in such a political union or none at all, but the speaker did not entertain this view. He saw no reason why the experiment should not be tue something different, I believe that tried with part of the islands, and if successful. he felt that the whole of the West Indies would come in.

These societies company to lay wires. represent the eight principal churches in point of numbers-Baptist North, Con gregational, Disciples, Episcopal, Luth eran. Methodist North, Presbyterian North and Dutch Reformed. Reports from treasurers of 19 of the societies, and estimates of the remaining two, show mission gifts for 1911 of $13,-358,000. Ten years ago the gifts to the same societies aggregated $7,429,000.

If the estimates of Methodist gifts are borne out, it will be found that the net result of the new missionary interest on the part of laymen since 1907 is an increase of $111,000 a year.

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER - While aviation is not just now quite as much in evidence as it has been, leading to an impression with some that it is at a standstill, there never was a time when so many able scientists and inventors were at work at it, and those who have kept informed of what is being done know that great progress has been made. They believe the time is not far distant when aeroplanes will be as plentiful as motors.

DAK CLIFF LIBRARY PLANS OF MEDIEVAL RESERVE GIVEN FREE STYLE ARE ACCEPTED TIMBER AND GRAZING

DALLAS, Tex .- Plans which have just been accepted for a new branch library at Oak Cliff provide for a substantial fireproof construction building of throughout. Reinforced concrete is to be used in the foundation, floors and roof. The walls are to be from 13 to 18 inches thick, backed with common brick and faced with white Bedford limestone or its equal.

The floors in the reading room are to be finished with art tile, while those in the book room and auditorium are to be finished in oak. All doors and windows are to be finished in old English style. The front door is to be battened in mediaval fashion and is to be studded with bronze nails and have bronze strap hinges.

The interior walls are to be acme cement plastering, laid on wire laths with a sand finish and tinted. The wainscot in the reading room is to be of Georgia marble, 31/2 feet high, and all other wainscoting is to be of cement. There will be an iron stairway with marble rises and treads. This is to be furnished with wrought-iron balusfers and oak hand rail.

The basement floor is to be of concrete cement finish. All interior walls are to be of hollow tiles, six inches The roof is to be of water proofed concrete. The house is to be electric wired, the wire contained in confuits, and is to be steam heated.

S. M. McCurray, the architect, says: "This building is designed along the medieval lines of architecture and combines the solidity and charm of the feudal castles with the grace and strength of modern fireproof construction and design. It offers an innovation in this city, where so many buildings of this character follow the Greek and Roman design, which, though beautiful in their outlines, were never intended for any and every Eurpose, but were designed primarily for

"Instead of putting money into complicated and expensive cornices, columns and capitals, we put our money directly irto the building itself, and in this case, where the money at hand is of such limited amount, and where so much is to be done with this money, it would seem to me that a building which combines the economy of construction with beauty of outline would be the one most desirable for the purpose at hand. It will num amount of room for the space which it occupies, also that the reading room offers light on every hand and no portion of the building is either dark or dim.

"The second story can be used for an auditorium for public speaking, etc., although it should be used, eventually, for an art gallery. Used as an auditorium, it should be noted that facing the audionce from the speaker's stand the audiof the speaker and avoids all unnecessary which are usually so unsatisfactory for in articles. rom a listener's standpoint."

SETTLERS ON OZARK

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.-Many improvements are reported by Superintendent Kiefer of the Ozark national forest in a report to the Little Rock Board of Trade.

"The change in the Ozark reserve has been remarkable of recent years," says Mr. Kiefer. "The sentiment that the reserves are to deprive the settlers of their privileges is rapidly changing as the work of the rangers and the purpose of the reserve is becoming better known On the Ozark reserve within the past seven or eight years of trial have been built 44 miles of telephone. The settlers have the advantage of better roads and are allowed the use of the telephone Also, lines are built in co-operation with the settlers, the reserve furnishing the supplies and the settlers the work.

"We give free timber for the erection of churches and schools in the reserve, and to any settler unable to purchase timber. We are explaining that forest fires do not improve the range, and when this is generally understood the fires will cease. Every farmer on the reserve is allowed to graze 25 head of cattle on the government range and the belief has gotten abroad that a thorough fire was necessary every year to clear off the range for new grass." Mr. Kiefer said that it is probable that a system of seven steel watch towers would be erected in the reserve within the year for better protection from the fires. Each tower will be equipped with telephone and range finders, whereby the exact location of the fire may be determined at once and the ranger in whose district it is notified without delay. The settlers will be employed as fire fighters, the pay to depend upon the length of time actually served in fighting the flames.

CENTURY TO THE CAPTURE OF CONSTANTINOPLE MINE EXPERTS MEET HISTORY OF THE TURKS FROM THE THIRTEENTH

(Special to the Monitor) Early in the thirteenth century in that strange, exclusive period of European history, when each nation was almost mythological to its neighbor, far away on the eastern confines of the continent a mighty struggle was going on, the inevitable struggle of those days, a struggle between civilization and barbarism; for the Mongols from the steppes of China, the bleak wastes of Siberia and the highlands of Tibet swept down in almost innumerable swarms over the west country of the Seliuks, and as, contending every inch, these latter gave way before them, colony after colony folded up their tents, while there was yet time to do so in peace, and came west, seeking safety in distance from their wild and warlike enemies. Among these was the clan of Oghuz. And it came about that as they journeyed they came across a battle. A glance showed their leader. Ertughrul, what was in progress-one of the many struggles, an almost every day happening at that time, between the Mongols and some tribe of the Seljuks: a second glance decided him, and just when the Seljuks seemed on the point of defeat Ertughrul, at the head of 400 trained warriors, rushed down the hillside, and converted defeat into victory. It was the battle of Angora, and though but little known, yet in its results it was one of the most momentous battles in rescue Ertughrul had come, of Sagut as his headquarters, and Sagut was the birthplace of the Ottoman em- out against their own people. pire. BUILDING STATISTICS

In reviewing the table of figures each week on building statistics throughout New England, the gain of a few million dollars in contracts awarded to date does not seem beyond present expectation, to keep pace with the steady increase along other lines of the real estate business; but when comparison is made with the 1908 volume of business. showing a gain in 1911 to be practically $60,000,000 with two more months to hear from, the real gist of activity can be seen.

LUMBER INDUSTRY IN VARIOUS PARTS OF UNITED STATES

Better Business Reported in Other Sections Than in New England-Western Mills Are Active

WHOLESALE PRICES

According to reports from other parts of the country the lumber industry elsewhere is more active than it is in New England. A Seattle despatch says:

Lumber mills which furnish large cargo to rail and ocean trade in Washington and Oregon are shipping so rapidly as to reduce stocks below ordinary totals carried by the manufacturers. Rail shipments have increased remarkably and exports to Australia, China and the west coast are brisk. Two government contracts to be filled during November include one of 3,000,000 feet to the Philippines and 1,000,000 feet to the canal zone. Advices from New York say that while stocks are fairly large the better call which has been noted tends to hold prices firm. Hemlock is moving freely into consumption and values are steady within the range quoted. Yellow pine is not showing up quite so well as in previous weeks, but the market is fairly white pine, but buying is still restricted to cover immediate requirements only. Spruce rules steady, especially for medium grades. Hardwoods are in better > to meet with a good demand. Local interests report business still quiet with little variation in prices. Quotations below are those of wholesalers in the yards as given by the Commercial Bulletin:

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent:

Wheat-The market was heavy with prices, after a slightly higher opening, working off again, influenced by enormous spring wheat receipts. Receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth were 879 cars against 657 last year, and Winnipeg reago. Of course with the much larger 9.26, September 9.20@25. crop, the Winnipeg movement will naturally be very heavy with any chance at all for thresing, but the big receipts in mand; prices steady. WEST NOT USING AMOUNT OF MONEY

CHICAGO-Certainly the West is not using its normal amount of funds. A glance at the currency shipments of one of the largest Chicago banks shows this clearly. This institution shipped to the country in the first 25 days of October $2,028,000. In the same period in 1910 it sent out $4,271,000, in 1909 $5,018,-000 and in 1908 over $3,000,000. Receipts are slightly over last year's and double the receipts of 1909 and 1908. A large industrial corporation tried last week to reduce its bank loan from 41/2 to 4 per cent, but failed, showing that some of the banks at least will not drop to lower rates easily. But with currency coming in from the country at its present rate it would not be surprising if rates shaded off fractionally. A sharp change there would change conditions instantly-but that change appears improbable just now. There is a remarkable difference of opinion among the leading bankers in this city. One of the best authorities says money is firming up, that demand is improving all over the West and that rates will in the next month advance slightly. Another well-known banker sees lower rates ahead and generally easy conditions the country over.

There are not yet any indications of broad improvement in trade conditions. Railroad earnings, the best of indications, are not picking up to any extent. The local market appears to be in a most uncertain position.

The ease in New York market continues, but banks here are pretty well loaned up and are not seeking new loans o such an extent as to lower rates and compete with the East, yet rates are a general half point lower than the figures sually prevailing at this time of year. The best collateral loans go at 41/2 to 5 per cent. Commercial paper is quoted at 41/2 to 5 per cent but the large banks are quite generally out of the market.

Brokers' efforts to place paper under 41/2 per cent are not successful with a few exceptions not worthy of any weight. As a result of this attitude in the big banks paper is going East to the lower discount rates obtainable there. One or two of the larger local houses have been almost cleaned out of notes due to sales made in New York by connections there.

HARRIS BANK IN CLEARING HOUSE

CHICAGO-At a meeting of members of the Chicago Clearing House Association the Harris Trust & Savings Bank was elected to membership in that organization, effective Nov. 1. The bank will be known in the organization as No. 28.

The local clearing house now has 21 members, including the sub-treasury, which is a non-voting organization. Of the bank members there are six nationals and 14 state institut

Besides transacting routine business, the association also upon previous recommendations of the clearing house committee, adopted the numerical system proposed by the American Bankers Association, which provides that all banks shall be numbered instead of using their names in the transaction of transit business.

There is no farm land speculation. Farm land values have held up well considering the inflation of recent years. The volume of farm loans moving is only 60 per cent of what it was a year ago. The prevailing rate in the West is 6 per cent, although in Illinois and Iowa erated four fruit vessels from Mexico it is about ½ of 1 per cent lower. WASHINGTON, D. C .- Statistics relative to the live stock (domestic anitor Durand.

The statement is based on tabular summaries prepared under the direction for agriculture, in the bureau of the census. Special attention is called to the fact that the present statement relates only to live stock on farms and ranges. It does not include the live stock in the cities and towns of the different states.

The aggregate value of all live stock, including domestic animals, poultry, and bees, as reported in 1910 was, in round numbers, $4,895,000,000, as compared with $3,075,000,000 in 1900. This is an increase of nearly $1,820,000,000, or 59.2 per cent. Slightly more than half of this enormous increase took place in the states of the east and west north central divisions, although greater percentages of increase are reported from the south Atlantic, east south central, and Pacific divisions. The smallest relative increases were in the New England and middle Atlantic divisions.

$2,076,000,000; cattle, $1,485,000,000; mules and mule colts, $522,000,000;

In 1900 cattle constituted 48 per cent value. But in 1910 horses had taken margin. Cattle increased in value less the decade, while the increase in the value of horses was $1,180,000,000, or only 30.3 per cent of the total as compared with 48 per cent. in 1900, and horses now represent 42.4 per cent of the total, while in 1900 they were only 29.2 per cent. Moreover, mules increased $326,000,000, or 166.2 per cent, in total value, and whereas that class of live stock was 6.4 per cent of the total in value in 1900 it has now advanced to lbs 541/2 @ 55c. 10.7 per cent. The two classes of horses and mules together, therefore, now constock on farms and ranges.

Swine have advanced materially in otal value and now represent 8.1 per ent of the total for all livestock, the acrease during the decade being $166,-000,000, or 71.6 per cent, and the present total value being nearly $400,000,000.

Of these, 20.580,845 were dairy cows, the total value of which was $704,612,000, and the average value, $34.24. The number of farms reporting Oct. 28 at 221/2. dairy cows was 5,127,635, or 80.9 per cent of the total number of farms in the United States; thus, there is an average such cows for the entire United States. Only 1,440,383 farms, or 22.7 per cent of all farms, report cows not kept for dairy purposes, but these farms report 11.788,-473 such cows, or twice as many per farm reporting as in the case of dairy It is noticeable that about one farm in five report yearling steers and bulls and only about one in eight older Local banks as a rule are well loaned Cincinnati, O.-John Duttendorfer, 25 steers and bulls, but farms with yearling BIG ORDERS FOR steers and bulls report an average of only four per farm, while those reporting older beef animals show nine per farm. Meaning of Education

EVERY human being has an absolute, indefeasible right to an education; and there is the correlative duty of government to see that the means of education are provided for all.

Government protects childhood, but childhood has more than physical wants. Education is due from government to chil-the province of education. Society rests upon education in its comprehensive meaning. Man must be educated out of,

lifted above lower impulses and made to respect social forms, the right and duties of persons and property. Education is to prepare the individual for life in social institutions. The first necessity of civilization is a system of universal education.

The President's Tour

THE net result of President Taft's tour has been more favorable to his personal interests than some of his best friends thought it would be. There has been no-"break" similar to the one at Winona. His consistent advocacy of his proposed arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France and his explanation of his reasons for proceeding notwithstanding the opposition of the Senate's foreign relations committee have won the people, and also not a few United States senators who hitherto have been hostile or indifferent. He can renew the pressure upon the Senate confident that he has the people with him, and that former President Roosevelt has not their support.

Nor is the verdict much different with respect to other items of his platform. His candor in saying what he thinks, irrespective of whether his hearers approve or not, helps him in the long run. He has been very emphatic and outspoken in defense of his policies, and has not hedged when in the territory of the faction of his own party that is openly opposing his renomination. Both combined capital and combined labor have been given to understand that he will vigorously enforce the law against monopoly and restraint of trade; and acts by his subordinates, with his sanction, have demonstrated that he means what he says. Consequently he can return to the White House reasonably content with the practical results of his trip so far as his political future is concerned.

There is considerable difference of opinion as to whether the President should absent himself for so long a time from the capital and as to the advisability of his voluntarily accepting the unusual physical demands of a continuous swing around the national circle, even though the most palatial appointments of present-day railroading have been at his disposal. Nor is this phase of the controversy rendered less acute by remembrance of who the Vice-President is. Moreover, there are those critics of the President's tactics who claim that even so august a personage is not exempt from the law of diminishing attention that is bound to follow ceaseless iteration by the same voice. Neither newspaper-makers nor readers will respond to the process of daily utterance of even a President's wisdom.

The City Drift in Canada, Also

Just as in all industrial nations, the Canadian census recently completed shows that the drift of population in that country is toward the cities. Notwithstanding that Canada during the decade covered by the enumeration had been engaged in the development of a new empire with almost boundless acreage, the cities have gained population in greater percentage than the rural districts. There are some striking instances. Quebec in the ten years gained 351,759 inhabitants, but if the gains made by its two principal cities and their suburbs be added together it will be found that they total over 225,000. The increase in Montreal's population

The province of Ontario gained 336,955, but of this number Toronto is credited with 168,200, Ottawa with 26,412, Hamilton with 29,245 and Fort William with 12,865; that is to say, about 70 per cent of the increase in Ontario went to swell the populations of the cities named.

One naturally turns to the prairie provinces with the expectation that out there, at least, the showing will be different, but this is not the case so far as the figures have been reported. Manitoba increased 199,000 in population during the decade, but Winnipeg captured 93,000 of the new arrivals, or nearly 50 per cent. The same state of things existed on the Pacific. British Columbia had a gain of 184,-109 inhabitants and Vancouver and its suburbs got 107,000, or about three fifths of them.

The cityward movement must be recognized as a trend as universal as the upward movement in prices of necessary commodities, and regarding and treating both problems in this light will lead to a more intelligent discussion and clearer explanation of them, and, eventually, to their solution. It is plain already that these trends are due to conditions growing out of modern civilization that have not as vet been considered with sufficient comprehensiveness. The parochial or provincial view of either or of both of them lands us nowhere save in a tangle of local or national political controversy and narrow partizan and economic strife. They are calling as earnestly as any questions now before the world for liberal and broad and unprejudiced discussion.

An Academic Fetish

For the sake of a degree of doctor of philosophy hundreds of students in American graduate schools are now expending much money, laborious effort and acute hope. With it they expect to be able to win higher teaching positions than might otherwise be won. With it they may adorn the title pages of books that may come from their pens. With it they acquire the title of "Dr.", which, as promiscuously used now in the United States, may mean almost anything that is pecuniarily seductive and miscellaneously absurd. Oftener than not the title of the thesis on which the title is won and the degree awarded clearly indicates that the effort of the scholastic seeker has been centered upon a most partial subdivision of the field of knowledge, so partial as to make the outcome of the research valuable only to the few rather than to the many, and useful only as data for real scholars with a capacity for synthetic generalization.

One of the many indications that William James gave during his incumbency of a chair at Harvard University that he was a freeman and did his own thinking was his attack upon the fetish that Harvard along with other universities had set up in the form of the degree of Ph.D. He scoffed at the notion that a man who Lad won it on a thesis such as most candidates present was thereby made more fit to teach youth than a person lacking the degree but well fitted by culture and a broad range of experience of the world to tell youth about life, literature and real learning. His words fell on stony ground at the time, but that did not worry him. Had he remained to this hour he would have found the new president of Harvard addressing his peers in the profession at their national meeting for discussing problems of curriculum and administration, saying precisely the same thing that Professor James ventured to say about the narrowness of the range of knowledge which the title as now conferred implies and the absurdity of rating it as highly as it is now esteemed both by recipients and by those who employ many of them as teachers.

But of course this is only one phase of a general process of cheapening of degrees to which American educational institutions were party for a long time, but which has been bettered during the past decade by some of the leading universities. The tide turned when President Eliot initiated the custom at Harvard of giving degrees with the reasons for the same. Then closed the era of "pull" in connection with doctors of divinity, doctors of law and the like. Now the doctors of philosophy are to have their turn of punishment.

Secretary

Fisher

on Alaska

Considered entirely apart from controversial questions, Secretary Fisher's summary of his experiences in Alaska and conclusions thereupon, before the mining congress in Chicago on Friday last, is instructive in the highest degree. There is doubt prevalent in quarters where the very best is wished and hoped for regarding the development of this great territory, whether this development can be carried on satisfactorily at long range under federal law; in fact, the conviction has grown with the progress of investigation that the federal administration of the affairs of Alaska has been faulty at many points. Secretary Fisher cannot justly be charged with taking the side of those who would attempt the exploitation of Alaska's resources without regard to equity or public welfare; he has always been found on the other side of the discussion; yet he sees a solution of the Alaskan problem only in

He was, to begin with, most agreeably impressed with the character of the present inhabitants of the territory. They are a fine body of people, he says, and are entitled to a territorial form of government. The existing laws applicable to coal lands in Alaska, in his opinion, neither promote development nor protect the public. All of its coal fields are at present withdrawn from entry. Of course, this state of things cannot continue; Alaska has as much right to go forward as any other territory under the jurisdiction of the United States, and Secretary Fisher promises to dispose of the numerous claims, under entries made prior to the withdrawal, now awaiting decision in the department of the interior.

The early statements purporting to give Secretary Fisher's conclusions as a result of his visit to Alaska were calculated to leave an erroneous impression. He was reported to have said, for instance, that the value of Alaska's mineral resources had been greatly exaggerated. We have his verdict now with greater clearness and at greater length. He told the mining convention that he found Alaska a country of great mineral and agricultural possibilities-indeed, he was prepared to go further and say that he found it a country of great mineral and agricultural probabilities needing development, ready for development and inviting development, but held back chiefly by inadequate transportation facilities and inadequate laws.

It is hardly necessary to say that the inadequacy of the laws is operating at present to prevent the flow of private capital into Alaska which would provide transportation. There is so much uncertainty and insecurity connected with Alaskan enterprise that private capital is repelled rather than invited. In the absence of private capital, inducements to invest private capital, or, to be more exact, in the face of opposition to private capital, the question of constructing and operating a government railway in the Controller bay region has received considerable attention. In Mr. Fisher's opinion, if a government railroad is desirable now or in the future there is ample opportunity for it. He says, however, that under the conditions which exist, and the fact that the Copper River railroad is already in the field, he can see no reason why the government should at this time take upon itself the unnecessary financial risks of supplying transportation, or why the Alaska Syndicate should not be permitted to continue "the enormously expensive experiment to which its present investment has already committed it and which that investment prevents it from abandoning."

This touches closely upon the controversial point, where it might be well, for the present, to leave it, merely adding that Mr. Fisher is apparently an optimist as to the future of Alaska even though it may be opened up under conditions that are not wholly acceptable to ultra-conservationists.

This Should Become Quite the Thing

FIVE HUNDRED members of the national poultry, butter and egg board sat down, so the despatches tell us, to a cold storage dinner at the Hotel Sherman in Chicago on Monday. The different things on the bill of fare had been in cold storage for months before reaching the hotel kitchen. Dates were given, so that those who participated in the feast know exactly what month and what day of the month the food they were eating had been placed in and released from cold storage. Under this arrangement, had January chicken been on the menu a man could swap one of his wings for a February drumstick on a neighbor's plate. Or, as the case might be, another could exchange his March neck for his neighbor's June wishbone. Much the same course was possible with reference to eggs, for could not one perchance be served with an April soft boiled, a May hard boiled or an August shirred, while an enterprising diner could easily have had butter on his plate running through the entire twelve months.

The importance of all this to the general reader lies in its application to his or her own case. Why should not cold storage dinners become popular, nay, fashionable? It would be something new, and that is always a consideration. The novelty, of course, would arise very largely from the manner of arranging them. Dates would be all important; or, if one cared to vary the matter, periods could be substituted. For instance, there could be in the menu, "roast beef-1905," or "roast beef-Roosevelt administration." Or. if one desired to bring the matter nearer home, an item in the menu could read, "turkey legs-1911," or it could be put "turkey legs-Bryan," or any other idol of the public eye. The dates and personages given here may be altogether too recent for cold storage purposes, but what is intended by naming them is to convey in the clearest manner possible a very pleasant idea.

It ought not to be difficult for any ingenious host or hostess to arrange a dinner menu which would carry out the cold storage idea esthetically and artistically. The various articles, indeed, could be selected from cold storage dates corresponding to happy events in the lives of the guests. Thus, it could appear from the menu card that the eggs were put on cold storage in the year of marriage, or first election to office, and this conceit could be carried through until the entire company would be represented and pleased. Possibly it might be wise to avoid dates in certain circumstances. Periods might be better. But, in general, the menu could be drawn up and carried out so as to make the occasion one of continuous interest and merriment, especially if the host and hostess were tactful enough not to get the dates and periods and persons mixed.

REGARDLESS of whatever disappointment or unpleasantness Cleveland may have experienced in its efforts to handle its street railway question, Detroit, it is understood, is proceeding to take its traction problem in hand practically along the same lines. That is to say, it proposes to carry passengers at a rate which private capital insists would mean loss rather than profit. A committee of fifty, having taken the matter in hand, put this question to the people of Detroit: "As a municipality we are seemingly pushed to the limit of our resources to perform such primary non-contentious municipal undertakings as, having no element of profit in them, cannot be left to private enterprise. Do taxpayers desire to assume the responsibility in the hope of securing cheaper transportation?" Of course, all that is necessary in a case of this kind is the willingness and the ability of the taxpayers to assume Detroit and Cleveland each has had its share of traction agitation. They have paid well for whatever experience they have gotten out of it. Neither has quite reached the end of it as yet. It would be folly for anybody outside of those cities to attempt to settle their traction troubles for them. In fact, when traction troubles arise anywhere, one of their very first manifestations is in the form of resentment toward advice. An anti-traction campaign of agitation must, apparently, run its full length.

Precisely the questions that have led to long years of controversy in Detroit and Cleveland are uppermost today in numerous cities. They arise primarily from discontent with insufficient and inefficient service. The traction companies, in many places overcapitalized, are striving to pay dividends on watered stock. Improvements do not keep pace with municipal growth, with the increasing demand for expedition combined with comfort in urban transportation. Not one or two or three causes for complaint, but dozens and scores of them, lead to the heating of public opinion to the indignation point, and then comes the demand which the Detroit committee of fifty says cannot be met unless the taxpayers, having taken over the traction properties, assume the responsibility for deficits.

In reality, and whatever the local feeling, the traction question should be handled under conditions that will permit of its calm and equitable treatment. People dissatisfied at home will go to another city and find perfect satisfaction in the traction service, although it is anything but satisfactory to those who use it regularly. Stripped of local prejudice, however, people bear with perfect willingness elsewhere a street car service which they would regard as inconvenient and annoying in their home towns,

A calm and unbiased survey of the situation will, we are positive, lead thinking people to recognize and acknowledge one very salient fact in the traction situation everywhere, namely, that the cause of most if not all of the agitation is due not so much to the amount of the fare but to the failure of the traction companies in the majority of instances to earn it. In this view of the matter, then, the settlement of the controversy, at least in these communities that have not already taken traction management into their own hands, lies with the traction corporations themselves. 'Good service, prompt service, comfortable service, would almost certainly bring about permanent settlements even in the excepted class of communities, though there might be deficits to meet. Citizens should not be content with poor service or ill treatment at any price.

THE need for drydocks to accommodate the larger ocean craft has long been evident on the coasts of the United States. With the announcement from Washington that Colonel Goethals has been instructed to proceed with the construction of two large docks at Colon, and have them completed by the time the Panama canal is opened in July, 1913, the American government has it in its power to render an inestimable service to the nation's shipping. In fact, the establishment of drydocks of large dimensions at Colon will be a benefit to the merchant marine of the

The question of drydocks has been before some of the larger cities along the Atlantic seaboard of the United States for some time without the ports having come to any definite conclusion. It is, of course, a fact that a large drydock on the northern continent would be more valuable to shipping interests that do not concern themselves with sailings farther south, but the Panama docks will at least be nearer than Europe. It is for this reason that the builder of the Panama canal has before him a project which, if made sufficiently complete, will insure him the regard of merchantmen everywhere. The limit of ship construction has by no means been reached, and while the ocean giants may not for some time do more than traverse the shortest way across the Atlantic, yet the day is undoubtedly coming when vessels as large as any now affoat will use the canal.

The Panama drydocks will naturally be available for naval purposes, and if the constructive ability of those in charge of the canal itself is repeated where the docks are concerned the waterway and the Colon port facilities will serve each other. Nothing could give greater impetus to maritime affairs in America than the spreading of the intelligence that the United States government intends to construct the Panama drydocks on a scale comparable with the largest and the most modern in the world.

By THE way, how would it do to submit the Sherman law to the
